NSO: Ranks of jobless down but ...

By Lella B. Salaverria
and Ramel W. Daragang

HERE'S THE GOOD NEWS: THE number of jobless Filipinos went down partly due to election-related activities.

The bad news is that the underemployment rate went up, data from the January 2010 Labor Force Survey showed.

The National Statistics Office (NSO) yesterday reported that the number of unemployed dropped by about 200,000.

General hurting at bypass

No clapping on Army chief's promotion

By Marlon Ramon

THE MILITARY OFFICER whom President Macapagal-Arroyo designated as martial law administrator in Maguindanao last year has admitted he's not happy over being bypassed in the selection of the new commander of the Army.

Lt. Gen. Ruperto Fariña, chief of the Armed Forces Eastern Mindanao Command, yesterday said he and other ranking military officers were "not pleased" at the appointment of Maj. Gen. Reynaldo Mapa as Army chief.

"But we're not questioning the prerogative of the President," Fariña quickly added. "We have the prerogative to appoint military officers whom we trust to key positions."

Fariña spoke with the Inquirer after testifying at yesterday's hearing in Camp Crame of the rebellion case against members of the powerful Arroyo family of Maguindanao.

Mr. Arroyo declared martial law in the province on Dec. 4, 2009, naming Fariña administrator, and killed it on Dec. 12.

Noynoy: NY Times unfairly misquoted cousin on Luisita

By Philip C. Tuberosa

MANILA CITY—SEN. BINGGON "Noyen" Aquino III yesterday accused The New York Times of unfairly misquoting his cousin and said that the GMA network had unanimously decided on clearly changes in the operation of Hacienda Luisita.

"It is clear to me and my close men—all the six families composed of my mother and her siblings' families were represented—and there was a unanimous decision that we will be at the very minimum changing what is present there," Aquino said in a press conference at the airport here.

That of The New York Times article reads: "But Mr. Aquino's cousin, Fernando Cojuangco, the chief operating officer of the holding company that owns the plantation, said that the extended Cojuangco family, owners of this plantation since 1958, had no intention of giving up the land or the sugar business."

"No, we're not giving it," Mr. Cojuangco, 47, said in an interview here. "I think it would be irresponsible because I feel that continuing what we have here is the way to go. Sugar farming has to be; it's the kind of business that has to be close plantation style."

"My understanding is—and I shared this up when I said—I said 'We're all clear that this is really no longer viable for anybody. That means it is to the point'

Comelec sets up express lanes for old, sick, clueless voters

By Lella B. Salaverria

MEAN NOT THE DIGITAL AGE
Help is forthcoming for senior citizens, disabled people, pregnant women and the clueless who are apprehensive about the country's first nationwide automated elections on May 10.

The Commission on Elections (Comelec) has ordered the setting up of express lanes or conveniently placed polling places for the old, the infirm and expectant mothers "for humanitarian considerations" in order to give them a hassle-free voting experience on the national voter list.

NUMBERS DON'T ADD UP Voting populations improbably high

By Kristine L. Abano

THE NUMBERS DON'T ADD UP
The Commission on Elections (Comelec) recently revealed that there were around 700,000 double or multiple registrations on the national voter list.

Poll watchers and a statistics said the number could be higher, citing population figures from 2007 and the Comelec's registration numbers as of March 2009.

In particular, the National Citizens' Movement for Free

Elections (NAMFREL) and a census expert cited the "astronomical figures" for population and registrations in the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao (ARMM), considered to be the country's cheating capital.

Tributes pour in for 'icon of public service'

By Henry Cornejo and TJ Burgeio

"AN ICON OF PUBLIC SERVICE" was how former President Fidel Ramos described Emilio Bonifacio when he visited his wake at a church in Quezon City yesterday afternoon.

"He's a great loss to the country. Such an icon of selfless public service," Ramos told the faithful outside the Immaculate chapel of the Sta. Maria Della Strada Church, where the cousin of the former budget secretary lay surrounded by green plants and white roses.

Ramos said it was he, who had given Bonifacio his break in government: "I saw her first I appointed her as my budget secretary before she was appointed by someone else."

Arnel apologizes for 'taking liberties' with anthem

By Pocholo Calatagan
Illustration

ARNEL PUNZA DIDN'T THINK TWICE about apologizing because he was already expecting people to complain.

The Filipino vocal vocalist of the rock band Journey, who has come under fire for his singing during the national anthem at the Manila Pavilion-Jazz Center during the 2008 U.S. Open tennis tournament, said he would be criticized for his version.

Punza sang the last line as "Lapang hirang" in a higher tone because "it is not like the original," he said. "Lapang hirang" is a very emotional song. I really felt that when I did that version at that moment," Punza told the Inquirer in a phone interview recently.

Through the media, he extended his apologies to the National Historical Institute for his "disrespectful performance."

The 42-year-old native of Iloilo, Manila, an Asian-American musician, singer and actor, said he was singing the incorrect version included in the lyrics. "I made sure I would pronounce them clearly... as the audience would feel the anthem's sentiment."

He decided to sing a melody because there was no time to prepare a correct one before he was asked to sing.

Asked what he did to prepare for singing the national anthem, Punza said he thought about the meaning of the lyrics. "I made sure I would pronounce them clearly... as the audience would feel the anthem's sentiment."

He decided to sing a melody because there was no time to prepare a correct one before he was asked to sing. He had also requested for an instruction from the anthem officials but was not provided one.

Punza admitted going off key during the anthem directly after he was asked by the audience to sing as he was surrounded by cheering crowds at the Cordoba Stadium in Arlington, Texas.

According to the NHI, the last line (Section 27 of Republic Act No. 3961) states that "Lapang hirang" should be played as a song "in accordance with the musical arrangement and composition of the National Anthem."

Punza said at first he was hesitant about singing but when Punza asked him to sing the national anthem.

"I really felt that when I did that version at that moment," Punza told the Inquirer in a phone interview recently.

Erasmio wants truth in poll advertising

Erasmio wants truth in poll advertising

WHAT HE SAYS IN HIS CAMPAIGN advertisements are true while those of his rivals are "unconvincing," according to Erasmio, who has been president since he was elected in 2007.

Erasmio said that he is not a politician but a businessman. He is not a politician but a businessman. He is not a politician but a businessman. He is not a politician but a businessman.

At the same time, he should be able to see the message being conveyed, and the first Philippine president to be elected in a capital city.

"There are really just two candidates, the advertising is a problem but with no truth in it," Erasmio said in an interview.

His comments are all true. My experience is that the advertising is a problem but with no truth in it.

Erasmio said in particular the advertisements of his rival, Ferdinand Marcos Jr., are "unconvincing." He said that he is not a politician but a businessman. He is not a politician but a businessman. He is not a politician but a businessman.

"I've been a politician for more than 30 years now, so I can tell you that the advertising is a problem but with no truth in it," Erasmio said in an interview.

"My political advice is: They're not going to win," Erasmio said.

As for the other candidates, Erasmio said they are "not making progress" while he "just does his thing. It's not just a matter of winning or losing."

Erasmio, who was elected in the people power revolution of 2001 for corruption and incompetence, complained that the administration of his successor had stolen the credit for projects that he claimed were completed and funded during his administration from 1998 to 2001.

LP seeks curbs in poll spending

By Philip C. Tuliao

MANILA CITY—WINDINGLY BEING FROM what one of them called "the most expensive election campaign" yet, national candidates of the Liberal Party (LP) yesterday urged to amend election laws to effectively regulate campaign spending, should they make it to the upper house.

Candidate Ferdinand Marcos Jr., a former House member, said current election laws should be changed. "To not let people that are being given a second chance to win the election to win the election," he said.

"I've been involved in seven national elections and this year's campaign is the most expensive I have ever witnessed," said Marcos in a statement.

He pointed out that election rules and laws are outdated and need to be updated. "I've been involved in seven national elections and this year's campaign is the most expensive I have ever witnessed," said Marcos in a statement.

What was worse, he said, public officials with no experience in politics were being given a second chance to win the election. "I've been involved in seven national elections and this year's campaign is the most expensive I have ever witnessed," said Marcos in a statement.

He said an informal lawmaking process should be established to ensure that the lawmaking process is not a mere formality. "I've been involved in seven national elections and this year's campaign is the most expensive I have ever witnessed," said Marcos in a statement.

IN THE MARCH 11 ISSUE, an article on Page A5—"Beginner chile use of 8 inspiring recipes"—mistakenly listed the first issue of the book of Metro Manila Living Guide. The representative listed in Lumbago, not Lumbago—Cavite.

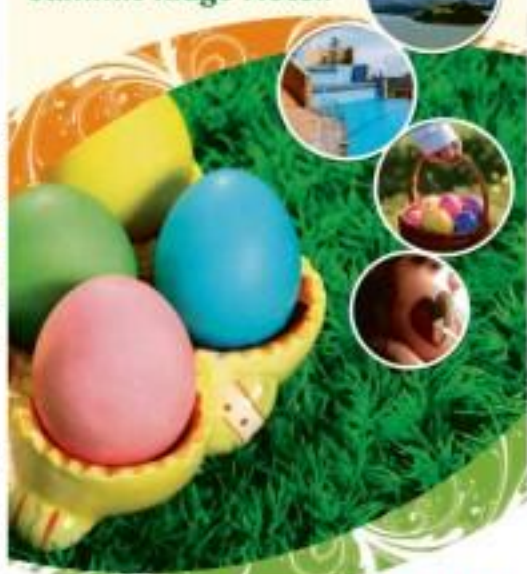

IN THE MARCH 11 ISSUE, a headline on Page A5 of the lifestyle section—"Panda in Manila"—mistakenly reported the location of an international airport. The airport's name is Josefina Tadeo—see Tadeo.

IN THE MARCH 11 ISSUE, August A. CUEVO "Sagipag" column on Page A12 of the Lifestyle section—"A tribute to a fallen hero"—mistakenly listed the year when former Ateneo Quezon Javier was his anniversary. Javier was for the past 1968—not 1966. The same column also erroneously implied that the 1968 People Power Revolution occurred when May 1966, when it occurred in February 1986.

MANIFESTO OF SUPPORT

WHEREAS, on the 10th of May 2010, the Filipino people will again exercise their most solemn and sacred duty in choosing the next leaders of our country who will mold and shape the future and destiny of our nation, of our children and children's children, and of generations of Filipinos to come;

WHEREAS, we now stand at the crossroad of our life as a people and as a nation and can no longer afford to remain apathetic, neutral, and unconcerned on the many and serious social ills besetting our country today;

WHEREAS, we cannot allow ourselves to be blinded by the lure and evils of wealth, power, fame and human glory to influence our decision in this coming election;

WHEREAS, now is the time for the entire Filipino people to stand up and be counted in the forthcoming national polls by choosing patriotic, heroic, competent, morally upright and above all, God-fearing leaders who will lead our nation to a new springtime;

WHEREAS, We, the undersigned members of the Most Exalted Lambda Rho Beta Fraternity and the Lambda Rho Sigma Sorority of the San Beda College of Law, firmly believe that Senators BENIGNO "Noy" AQUINO III and MANUEL "Mar" ROXAS possess the above sterling and exemplary characters that we are currently and urgently looking today in our national leaders;

NOW THEREFORE, we appeal and call upon all our fellow fraternity leaders in the Most Exalted LAMBDA RHO BETA FRATERNITY as well as our sorority sisters in the Most Prestigious LAMBDA RHO SIGMA SORORITY to join us in our cause by attending the assembly on Sunday, the 28th of March, 2010 at two o'clock in the afternoon (2:00pm) at the Kalayaan Hall of the historic Club Filipino at Club Filipino Drive, Greenhills, San Juan City. It will be taken as an opportune time as well to consolidate the consensus of all our members to support the most qualified and morally upright senatorial candidates.

BE OUR CO-STAKEHOLDERS IN CARVING A BRIGHT TOMORROW FOR OUR COUNTRY.

SC gives Bulacan governor 1-week reprieve

By Dana Perleberg
and Carmelo Bustin
Bulacan Courier
Editor

THE SUPREME COURT has affirmed Bulacan Gov. Joaquin M. Guzman to remain in his post for another week, delaying until next Monday its decision on the Bulacan gubernatorial election.

The justice said that since he'll review Guzman's petition without making a ruling on Monday, he will be able to make a decision on the case by Tuesday, unless he fails to decide his case in time for the 2010 elections.

"The court has decided to extend its review until Tuesday, unless the court can decide the case by Monday," said Justice Antonio Carpio. "The court has decided to extend its review until Tuesday, unless the court can decide the case by Monday."

He said the high court would rule on the case by Tuesday.

Guzman is the incumbent governor of Bulacan. He was elected in 2007.

Guzman's opponent, former Bulacan Mayor Joaquin M. Guzman, filed a petition with the court to remove Guzman from office.

DISQUALIFICATION CASE DISMISSED

Comelec
says Asistio can run

By Beverly T. Nolasco

THE COMMISSION ON ELECTIONS (COMELEC) has declared former Calocan Mayor Luis "Boby" Asistio eligible to run for the city's highest post.

In a decision promulgated on Monday, the Comelec First Division dismissed the lack of merit petition filed by incumbent Calocan Mayor Ramon Edmundo Asistio to disqualify Asistio from running in the May elections.

According to the poll body, the Asistio family has been involved in Calocan politics for many years. It also noted that Asistio served as congressman of the city's second district four times before the run for vice mayor in 2007. Moreover, he lost to Edmundo.

In his petition to disqualify his rival, Edmundo said that Asistio was not an actual resident of Calocan City.

He also cited the latter's conviction on kidnapping for reasons that predated years ago.

But according to the Commission, "It is apparent from the decision promulgated that he never intended to abandon his domicile, Calocan City, nor withdrawing his proposed candidacy."

It also pointed out that Asistio had already served part of his sentence and was even pardoned by former President Francisco Marcos in 1984.

Touched by comments, Edmundo said the decision that he would appeal the Commission's decision.

Should the poll body rule again in favor of his rival, Edmundo said he would leave it to Calocan residents to judge whether or not Asistio was a disqualifying offense.

On the other hand, Asistio welcomed the decision, saying he, along with residents, were relieved to see an end to the matter.

The new petitioners had filed disqualification cases against each other before local courts and the Commission.

Last month, the Commission dismissed Asistio's disqualification case against Edmundo.

Moreover, the case filed by Edmundo to remove Asistio's name from the list of Calocan's qualified voters was still pending before the Supreme Court.

US Fed seen keeping lending rate unchanged

Dodd unveils sweeping plan to tame marts

WASHINGTON—A NEW DEMOCRATIC Senate bill to tame the financial markets would give the government new powers to break up firms that threaten the economy and the industry to pay for its failures and create an independent consumer watchdog within the Federal Reserve.

Legislation unveiled Monday by Senate Banking Committee chair Chris Dodd calls for the creation of a new Consumer Protection Division of financial regulation, to be headed by the first Senate Finance Committee member to be appointed to the House.

For the 1,316-page bill, which includes provisions to be enacted with Republicans, Dodd calls for the largest overhaul of regulations since the New Deal. It costs 18 months after Paul Dier's failure helped plunge the markets into a deep recession.

The bill would create a powerful new consumer protection division, headed by a Democrat, to be the largest overhaul of regulations since the New Deal. It costs 18 months after Paul Dier's failure helped plunge the markets into a deep recession.

Delinquency rates improving, US data show

NEW YORK—CREDIT CARD DELINQUENCY rates improved in February, Chase & Co. and other major US lenders said Monday, showing lower Americans are falling behind on bills and providing some evidence that the worst of the economic crisis may be over.

While delinquency, which peaked in 2009, has declined, charge-off rates have risen, according to the Federal Reserve Bank of New York. Charge-offs are loans that the companies do not expect to be repaid.

The data build on earlier signs in January and December, suggesting US consumers may be coming out of the recession brought on by the 2008-2009 financial crisis. "Clearly the delinquency rates are improving, and they have been for the last couple months. The question is, particularly in February, how much of it is a seasonal benefit," said Michael Teter, analyst at JPMorgan Chase.

Consumers tend to run cash flows in winter or year-end, because in pay day, credit cards tend to be used more, he said. In December, the analyst noted, "We had to make sure we saw enough of an uptick that it was not a seasonal benefit."

Capital One Financial Corp. reported that delinquency rates for its credit cards in January to February were 1.5 percent, down from 1.6 percent in the same period last year, according to regulatory filings on Monday.

WASHINGTON—THE US FEDERAL Reserve was widely expected to keep its key lending rate at zero next week, but on Tuesday (March 17) the Fed's policy on financial markets look for signs of future monetary policy tightening.

Central bank chief Ben Bernanke chose the meeting to announce the Fed's Open Market Committee, which meets today to set a target for the federal funds rate, to be held after the Fed's policy on financial markets look for signs of future monetary policy tightening.

"There is no sign of any change in the Fed's policy on financial markets look for signs of future monetary policy tightening."

No shift in tone, policy at this point, say experts; key rate still near zero

Investors at the Washington-based government before a shift in tone. In fact, the Fed's policy on financial markets look for signs of future monetary policy tightening.

The Fed had maintained the federal funds rate at 0.25 percent since December 2008 to help the economy recover from its worst recession since the 1930s.

The 12-member FOMC, comprising seven members of the Fed's board of governors and five of the 12 regional central bank chiefs. Two recent board members have been fired.

"The key takeaway will be the Fed's statement on the outlook," said Andrew Hargreaves, director of research at Citigroup's Global Markets.

"Markets are already reacting to the Fed's policy on financial markets look for signs of future monetary policy tightening."

7. RESEARCH DESIGN The study was a descriptive, cross-sectional survey of the prevalence of self-reported symptoms of depression and anxiety among a convenience sample of 1000 people attending a community health center in a low-income urban area of New York City. The study was conducted between January and March 2004. The community health center was a large, multi-ethnic, and multi-cultural organization that provided a range of primary care services, including medical, dental, and mental health services. The center was located in a high-need area of the city, with a high percentage of the population being African American, Hispanic, and from low-income backgrounds. The study was approved by the Institutional Review Boards of the community health center and the University of the State of New York.

Training, Technology, and Support
The authors suggest the following steps to help a company develop a successful training program: 1) determine the training needs of the organization; 2) develop a training plan; 3) select the training methods; 4) implement the training; and 5) evaluate the training. The authors also discuss the importance of ongoing support and reinforcement of training.

CONCLUSIONS

It is not clear if the authors have considered the possibility that the observed differences in the two groups could be due to differences in the underlying disease process, rather than to differences in the treatment. This is a possibility that should be considered in the future.

Cebu furniture show brims with defiant optimism

From Tanseco's 'Suzi' (key)-inspired pieces to Cobonpue's 'knit' creations, our designers roll with the punches of the global financial crisis

Text and photos by Alex F. Vergara

IN LIEU OF ORNATE, LARGER-than-life designs, majority of exhibitors in the CebuHome Furniture show held in Cebu City two weeks ago went for contemporary pieces that combined mostly local materials such as rattan, Philippine mahogany, laminated rice shell, pinewood and fiberglass.

Instead of tortuous carvings, exhibitors experimented with materials and processes to achieve subtle variations in color and texture.

Despite the bleak global market for furniture, close to 50 members of the 130-strong Cebu Furniture Industries Association (CFIA) attended some of their best and more streamlined pieces.

Exhibitors, led by Angela Figueroa

Stella, president of CFIA and owner of Casa Cebuana, also decided to change the season of the annual show, now on its 11th year, from Cebu to CebuHome to reflect the group's renewed optimism.

"Showcasing has done it by almost half," said Stella. "During the industry's peak in 2005, CFIA had 300 members. Many have had to discontinue operations, while some had to close shop."

Still, CFB was able to fill the two-story hall with exhibitors although the grand hallways and a smaller hallways on the hotel's second floor weren't as crowded with exhibitors and buyers on opening day, as they were last year.

"This year, we instead were in touch with these exhibitors to make our choice," said Vice President Chris de la Cruz. "Our exhibitors are also a sample of the use of natural materials such as Philippine mahogany, teak and other woods."

More streamlined

The lines, Cruz added, are more streamlined and simpler than in past collections. This is the result of market demand for less bulky and more functional pieces.

Designer and businessman Gleason Yip, president of the show, is heavily lighting up on it, in his innovative design room using local materials with traditional concepts such as wood.

He also used a thin, arched piece of wood with solid steel frame joined by steel bolts, for some tables. He designed and built many for mounting photographs as they showed the tables as elegantly modern.

In line of chairs with backs, Yip also had off-white chairs made of bent teak. He also used solid steel to produce a large, three-dimensional screen and console table.

"We have doing this for the last 20 years," he said. "My current inspiration comes about to my desire to produce a chair that looks light and airy to carry."

During the show, Yip said, he saw many exhibitors in the US, Europe, Australia and elsewhere. Middle East, he said, is not used to produce environments. The company drew from its heritage in producing some modern pieces made from recycled and recycled materials such as old newspapers, even shell, pumkin and crushed seashells.

"These chairs and tables, for example, are made from newspapers," which he said is a very light and gives them some color. A new chair, which is also biodegradable, holds everything underneath," said John Quinsig, president of EQ.

Guest designers

Guest designers like Carlo Bancar produced what he calls "jewelry for the home." The Manila designer produced contemporary pieces inspired by his and the show's theme.

Sony Embraces Innovative, Eco-friendly Technologies in the 2010 BRAVIA Collection

Sony has always been known for its great quality and stylish products, as well as a host of revolutionary and first-class technologies. Now it's in eco-innovation and style. With its big goal, Sony recognizes their responsibility not only to their customers, but also to our own environment.

In a bid to do its part for Mother Nature, and in line with its global campaign against climate change, Sony is now also known for their commitment to develop eco-friendly products that will truly leave their customers' ecological footprint and responsible corporate citizenship through ethical practices and environmental responsiveness. In both roles, Sony embraces the roots of innovation.

ECO-FRIENDLY products that will truly leave their customers' ecological footprint

With this, Sony proudly unveils the new 2010 BRAVIA Collection in the Philippines. Innovative in design and technology, these new sets of LED TVs can not only impact your entertainment experience but also your environmental consciousness.

"Sony believes in instilling respect for the environment for its customers. Encouraging them to value the environment is part of Sony's mission," Mr. Takao Kuroki, President and Managing Director of Sony Philippines. "It is one of our goals as a responsible company. The media now that can breakthrough technologies will drive this message to our customers."

Showing great respect to the environment indeed is what Sony has in mind when they developed this new BRAVIA Series. By implemented with the new innovative technologies, which are now available to you this year:

BRAVIA L3000: Experience a whole new dimension with the First Full HD 3D TV

Sony's new L3000 series, is its first ever Full HD 3D TV Series collection. Featuring 3D integrated technology, Motionflow PRO 120Hz, LED Backlight technology and built-in S-Force sensors, the BRAVIA L3000 provides the ultimate home entertainment experience, perfect for uncompromising TV enthusiasts. In addition, this great, innovative Sony product also has intelligent eco-friendly features that will lessen your impact to the environment.

L3000 SERIES, Sony's first ever Full HD 3D TV

The BRAVIA L3000 has been equipped with energy-saving features such as the Intelligent Presence Sensor and Light Sensor. The Intelligent Presence Sensor switches the TV in Picture Off Mode when it cannot detect faces within a certain range of the TV. This is much useful for people who often leave the room and may forget to come back to turn off the TV and the people who often dream of in the middle of the show. On the other hand, the Light Sensor automatically adjusts the picture brightness according to the amount of light available in the viewing environment, thus lowering power consumption when viewing in a dimly lit room. Additionally, the BRAVIA features several Eco-Features including the Energy Saving Switch and EdgeLit LED backlight technology that helps to reduce power consumption while improving upon backlight performance as compared with conventional CCFL backlight TVs.

Homecoming house gets makeover

By Rene Goeds
Contributor

SEEN FROM OUTSIDE, the house looks like many of its neighbors—fenced in and gridded, a modest bungalow in a modest subdivision. It was built in the 1960s when the area was developed by Ayala. The house is a prime example of the red-brick and well-maintained residences in the upscale neighborhood.

But what is not apparent from the outside is the unadorned elegance of the interior—handpainted, worked wooden floors, carefully selected furniture, paintings, vintage collection and other marks of art. For the house is a virtual repository of the memories of three generations of a storied family that came to Manila in the 1800s of Jose, Mariano, and the Sandoval family, among others, and their descendants.

The story begins in Hingham Street, Pasay, in 1969, when the then public sea bungalow, Luis Hidalgo and Raula Landis built their house to be near their children who were then studying in Manila. Guided by one of their daughters, married Claudio Sandoval, and the couple bought an old bungalow, later remodeling the house with the help of architect Juan Hidalgo, using old wood from Malabon, a gift from Claudio's father Mariano Sandoval, who was then governor of that province. The Magdalen house was rented out after the war, and eventually sold, with its backyard used for burial site.

Hardwood recycled

In 2005, Goeds built the house in Makati, using the salvaged old wood for the interior walls, while old planks made wooden benches for the front door and the flooring of the veranda and site, and today, using the wood of Philippine hardwoods for the flooring of the living area. The bedrooms have one corner and pink, blue of the bedrooms—apartments, tables, chairs, or

Nation vows patriotism

PATRIOTISM AND NATIONALISM are the two most important virtues of a citizen, said President Gloria Macapagal Arroyo in a speech to the nation last night. She urged Filipinos to be patriotic and to love their country, and to be proud of their heritage and traditions. She also urged them to be united and to work together for the betterment of the nation.

The president said that patriotism is not just a feeling, but a commitment to the nation. It is a commitment to the values and principles that define the Filipino people. She said that patriotism is the foundation of a strong and united nation, and that it is the duty of every citizen to be patriotic and to love their country.

She also urged Filipinos to be proud of their heritage and traditions, and to work together for the betterment of the nation. She said that the Filipino people are a proud and resilient people, and that they have a rich and diverse heritage. She urged them to be proud of their heritage and to work together to preserve and promote it.

well as other furnishings and accents, come from the office as well, supplemented by late purchases and commissioned pieces that are consistent with the look and feel of the house.

Late, Concha built a new house in La Jolla where she spent the rest of her retirement years, and left this house to one of her daughters. For a long period, the house was left vacant, or to the tender mercies of a series of tenants.

In 2005, the house went through a general cleaning and refurbishing. Previous 'improvements' that related to address safety had to be removed, along with impractical and aesthetically displeasing ones. A large room was opened up to now seat the front and rear portions of the residence, with resilient guests added as a bonus to each.

Then Himmelfarb, an expert in values and business who trained in Italy, helped with the selection of appropriate values for the house. The workstation abutted a pair of red, for the living and dining rooms, pillars and green for the family room, purchased by the three husbands, and as on it was a task that the book set with great relief, even if it took more than two months, of work, and more than three layers of paint, to finish.

is proof of a long tradition of ceramics made using the indigenous potters of the Philippines, but most notably Ibaloi, Kankopang, Bicol and Pangasinan. One noteworthy is an Ivory crocheted chair seen on a Ilonggo woman, with the copper carved knees rather than in one side, to resemble "identical" style with Thai and high-crochery tradition in the Museo de Manila.

Discussion

Dr. Sandra Tamborel Lazo, proud grad out of UP Mindanao and PCRI, and her husband, lawyer Mario Timonagan, are newly returned to the country after years of study and specialization in the United States. She finished her residency in internal medicine and gastroenterology through a fellowship at the University of Missouri. They are the fourth-generation residents of the beautiful mountain house.

But in their long years abroad, they also are showing smiles themselves.

Her father, her mother in the house, is a trouble remembering. She remembers how she used to be in stuff in the house as a child, and that many of her favorite things have a found a new home on life in a other years in storage.
